SPONSORSHIP

This book was developed by University College Cork and Breakthrough Cancer Research in Ireland and printed with the aid of a research grant from Pancreatic Cancer Action. The aim was to translate nutritional guidelines for patients with pancreatic cancer into everyday simple foods that patients and their families could easily prepare. The authors are very grateful to our sponsor for funding this project which allows for copies of this book to be distributed free of charge to patients with pancreatic cancer throughout the UK.

For more information, visit Pancreatic Cancer Action at www.pancreaticcanceraction.org

Breakthrough Cancer Research scientists and clinicians work tirelessly to develop new treatments for those cancers which cannot yet be cured. Focusing exclusively on research our charity is dedicated to funding the efficient and effective development of new treatments for cancer. Research programmes funded by Breakthrough Cancer Research must focus on translating lab discoveries into new treatment opportunities. To this end we work closely with clinicians throughout Ireland and abroad so that our research is targeted at finding new therapeutic options for poor prognosis and currently incurable cancers.

WELCOME

Welcome to 'Nourishing Your Body During Pancreatic Cancer Treatment'

Not only does good nutrition during cancer treatment help you to feel better, it has also been proven to improve treatment outcomes, lower your risk of complications and help you to heal and recover faster.

If you have a good appetite and your weight is normal then a healthy eating diet will provide you with the nutrients you need to fight your disease.

Unfortunately, eating and maintaining weight can be a difficult task for some cancer sufferers. Weight loss during cancer treatment has been proven to negatively impact recovery and is also distressing for patients.

This booklet has been created by dietitians and chefs to provide patients with advice on how best to combat cancer-induced weight loss and other eating related problems that are encountered on a day to day basis. We strive to translate this information into simple, nourishing meals.

In this booklet you will find a bank of quick, easy and energy dense recipes that have been created specifically for people who find it hard to maintain a healthy weight. We hope you find this book helpful and enjoy experimenting with the recipes provided.

Please note

- It is important to remember that the advice and recipes included in this booklet are specifically tailored for people with cancer who are losing weight due to their disease or the treatment they are receiving.
- One size does not fit all; it is essential that you liaise with your medical team or dietitian on whether the advice in this booklet is appropriate for you.
- If you have any other conditions besides cancer it is important to talk to your nurse, doctor or dietitian for specific advice.
- This booklet should never be used to replace advice from your medical team or dietitian.

LETTER FROM AUTHOR

Aoife Ryan PhD RD,
Dietitian & Lecturer in Nutritional Sciences

At University College Cork in Ireland we run an active research programme into malnutrition in cancer. Cancer-induced weight loss affects 30-80% of patients with solid tumours and is associated with poorer tolerance to chemotherapy, impaired quality of life, more frequent hospital admissions and significantly reduced survival. Scientific studies have consistently shown that patients with pancreatic cancer experience the most severe forms of weight loss and malnutrition.

Even though many cancer patients try to eat as much as they can they are unfortunately dealing with a series of complex changes in their metabolism. The cancer itself produces many 'hormones' that directly break down muscle and fat stores in the body. It also switches on the immune system to produce chemicals in the body that cause inflammation and reduce appetite. In pancreatic cancer there is the added challenge of impaired digestion and absorption. The net result can be rapid weight loss over a short period of time which is often referred to as 'cachexia' by medical professionals. It is a huge challenge to get these patients to stabilise their weight and an even greater challenge to get them to gain weight.

Over the past two years our research team at the Department of Food & Nutritional Sciences at UCC have produced two cookbooks for cancer patients to help them to maximise their oral intake of calories and protein while undergoing cancer treatment: 'Good Nutrition for Cancer Recovery' (2014) & 'Eating Well with Swallowing Difficulties in Cancer' (2016). I was delighted when Pancreatic Cancer Action approached us to assist us in making evidence-based cookbooks available to cancer patients based in the UK.

Our team of oncology dietitians and chefs, have worked hard over the last year to translate the nutritional advice for people with pancreatic cancer that are losing weight into simple, nourishing and enjoyable meal ideas. We developed 80 recipes included in this book specifically for patients who are losing weight. Nutritional targets for meals were based on nutritional requirements outlined in the British Dietetic Association's guidelines for nutrition and hydration in nutritionally vulnerable patients. {Targets for main and light meals were set at 500-800 kcals per portion or above. Protein targets were set at a minimum of 15g per portion with a target of >23g protein per portion. Snacks were set at >300kcals and 5g protein, while soups and drinks >300kcal and 3 g protein per serving.}

I am hugely grateful to the team I have worked with on this project especially: Éadaoin Ní Bhuachalla, Ruth Elliott & Fiona Dwyer; our dietetic colleagues in the Irish Nutrition & Dietetic Institute; our academic colleagues at the Tourism and Hospitality Department at Cork Institute of Technology (Jane Healy & Ann O'Connor); our medical oncology colleagues (especially Dr Derek Power, Consultant Medical Oncologist at Mercy University Hospital, Cork) and the wonderful team at Breakthrough Cancer Research (especially Eoghan O'Sullivan & Oral Dolan).

I hope that this book brings to life the nutrition advice many cancer patients receive from their doctors and dietitians. In turn, I hope it helps in some small way improve the difficult and challenging treatment pathways cancer patients and their families endure.

LETTER FROM HEPATO-PANCREATICO- BILIARY DIETITIAN

Mary Phillips BSc RD

President of Pancreatic Society of Great Britain & Ireland.

I am delighted to have been invited to provide an opening chapter for this book.

Patients undergoing cancer treatment can often struggle to eat sufficient food to give them enough strength to manage their normal activities. Energy dense, high protein foods help to ensure that patients can make the most of the food that they can eat.

Managing the symptoms associated with cancer treatments can be challenging, and this book addresses some of the common issues cancer treatment presents, with helpful tips to manage these issues if they occur.

Pancreatic cancer is different to other cancers as the pancreas plays a key role in digestion. Pancreatic cancer, especially where the disease is in the head of the pancreas, is likely to reduce the ability to digest food properly, and this is treated with pancreatic enzyme supplements. Medication such as Creon®; Nutrizym®; Pancrease® and Pancrex ®are prescribed to help patients digest their food. This medication provides pancreatic enzymes to work directly on food to help the body digest and thus absorb the nutrition food contains.

There are many myths surrounding nutrition in cancer, and this book provides a pragmatic approach to these issues. Good nutrition provided by a balanced diet, with sufficient energy, protein, vitamins and minerals will help maintain weight and improve tolerance of cancer treatments. Patients who are losing weight do not normally benefit from following restricted diets.

I hope this book helps those patients looking for high energy menu options to help them maintain their nutritional status throughout their treatment.

LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE PANCREATIC SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

'Nourishing Your Body During Pancreatic Cancer Treatment' is perhaps the most important 'treatment' for our patients. This holds true whether you are recovering from surgery, receiving chemotherapy or simply living. This is the first book delivering clear nutritional advice to pancreatic cancer patients and their carers. Aoife Ryan and her team in Cork must be congratulated for producing this excellent, clear and concise but very readable book.

The first section is essential reading. It explains why a pancreatic cancer patient may experience problems trying to eat and offers straightforward solutions. We then learn that it is safe and beneficial to follow a high energy balanced diet. The enticing collection of over 80 recipes covers, soups, light meals, main dishes, deserts and high energy drinks. There are several heart-warming favourites! Importantly all the recipes use easily sourced ingredients. The recipes are straightforward to follow and total time for preparation and cooking is summarized at the start. Meals that can be frozen are identified allowing prior preparation.

The Pancreatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland endorses this book and also would like to thank Pancreatic Cancer Action for making it freely available.

WHAT IS CANCER?

Every part of our body is made up of small units called cells. These cells are constantly growing, dividing, dying off and being replaced. This cycle is essential for the human body to function and is very tightly controlled in healthy individuals. Cancer occurs when the body's cells divide and multiply without control. Cancerous cells rapidly split and copy themselves which results in many new cancerous cells being formed. This uncontrollable growth causes cancer cells to spread to other parts of the body. These cells do not die off as normal cells do, and eventually these accumulating cancer cells form lumps or tumours.

Cancer can occur anywhere in the body and there are many different forms. Each type of cancer will have a unique effect on the body and will cause different symptoms in different people.

What is pancreatic cancer?

Pancreatic cancer occurs when a malignant tumour forms in the pancreas. There are two main types of pancreatic cancer:

Exocrine tumours

These make up the vast majority of all pancreatic cancers (around 90%) and come from the cells that line the ducts in the pancreas which carry digestive juices into the intestine. These are called pancreatic ductal adenocarcinomas. Other exocrine tumours of the pancreas are rarer, and include adenosquamous carcinomas and undifferentiated carcinomas.

Endocrine tumours

These are known as neuroendocrine tumours, and are much less common. These tumours sometimes make hormones such as insulin, and glucagon, to control blood sugar. Often referred to as either PETs or islet cell tumours, they are very rare, making up just 2-5% of pancreatic tumours.

Benefits of good nutrition

Eating a nutritious diet is essential during cancer treatment. Research has shown that weight loss caused by cancer and cancer treatment can reduce a person's response to treatment, increase treatment related side-effects and reduce a person's overall survival. This type of weight loss is stressful and can majorly affect your overall quality of life. A healthy diet includes a variety of foods including carbohydrates, protein, fats, vitamins and minerals. A diet rich in energy and protein helps you to maintain a healthy weight during cancer. Side-effects caused by the disease or its treatment can often make eating and maintaining a healthy weight a difficult task for cancer patients. It is important to remember that keeping well-nourished is vital for recovery and yields many physical and mental benefits.

What is cancer-induced weight loss?

Cancer itself or its treatments can greatly alter how your body uses the food you eat. Oftentimes your energy needs increase and your food intake decreases due to a poor appetite or other symptoms. This results in weight loss. Even if you are eating a normal amount of food, your body might not be using the nutrients in your food properly or it may be burning energy faster than usual. No matter what the cause, it is essential that unintentional, rapid weight loss is addressed as it has a negative impact on recovery. The most important thing you can do during cancer and weight loss is to eat little and often, snack frequently and introduce calories where ever possible.

Check your weight

One of the most important things you can do is monitor your weight.

To track your weight you should weigh yourself weekly. Ideally this should be done on the same day each week, at the same time of day and on the same weighing scales. This is to make sure that all measurements are comparable. You should weigh yourself first thing in the morning in minimal clothing, after you have emptied your bladder.

Problems which may affect eating

Cancer and cancer treatments have different effects on everybody. The side-effects can vary from person to person and not everybody will experience them. Chemotherapy can result in many of the side effects discussed below. Surgery to remove a tumour can result in problems eating and digesting a normal diet. For some people tube feeding may be necessary post-surgery.

1. Poor Appetite

A change in appetite is very common during cancer treatment. Your favourite foods may no longer appeal to you, you may have a reduced appetite or you may not want to eat at all. Without forcing yourself to eat, it is important to try to eat small amounts regularly to avoid weight loss.

- Eat whenever you feel hungry. If you are hungriest in the morning then eat your biggest meal at that time.
- Eat frequent small meals to avoid feeling uncomfortably full. Snack often and avoid large, off-putting portions. Make these snacks high in calories and protein.
- Limit drinks before and during meals as they fill you up.
- Limit fibre as it fills you up quickly.
- Bland foods may be easier to tolerate.

2. Tiredness

Fighting cancer and undergoing cancer treatments can often drain your energy and leave you feeling tired and fatigued. It can be due to a variety of reasons. Persistent fatigue can lead to weight loss quite easily as you might not have enough energy to shop, prepare or even eat food.

- Get a friend or family member to do your shopping. Many larger shops deliver groceries directly to your house when you order online.
- Prepare your meals when you have energy and refrigerate/freezer them.
- Get help cooking meals.
- When too tired to cook, consume nourishing, high-calorie drinks such as milk, smoothies, juices, milk-shakes or prescribed nutritional supplements.
- Eat foods that require little preparation and snack frequently.
- Light exercise may help reduce fatigue and increase appetite.

3. Nausea and Vomiting

Nausea is when you feel sick, have an unpleasant feeling in your stomach or throat, feel dizzy, clammy and don't want to eat. Vomiting is actually being sick or throwing up. The most common cause of these symptoms is chemotherapy. Cancers of the pancreas can also affect the way your stomach empties by causing narrowing of the duodenum, or affecting the nerves in your stomach. These conditions reduce the speed at which your stomach works, this can make you feel very full when you are eating and cause symptoms such as indigestion, nausea and vomiting. Some people may have a stent (tube) placed in the duodenum to help prevent them from vomiting. You should discuss these symptoms with your doctor as anti-sickness medications can ease nausea and prevent you throwing up. If you are vomiting frequently, seek medical advice and try to stay hydrated with clear fluids or nourishing fluids like milk and sports drinks.

- Eat little and often. Avoid skipping meals; this can lead to hunger which worsens nausea.
- Bland, cold foods have less taste and smell and will be better tolerated.
- Avoid greasy, spicy, and sugary foods with a strong odour.
- Drink flat ginger ale or include ginger in meals, as ginger soothes nausea.
- Avoid your favourite foods when nauseated, as you may grow to dislike them.
- Avoiding eating 1-2 hours before treatment, it may lessen nausea.
- Try not to prepare meals when nauseated and rest after meals.

4. Malabsorption

The pancreas produces digestive enzymes to help you break down your food. These enzymes consist of:

- Lipase (to break down fat)
- Amylase (to break down carbohydrates)
- Protease (to break down protein)

Diseases in the pancreas often result in low levels of pancreatic enzyme production, and this will reduce your body's ability to digest food. This is called 'malabsorption', and results in symptoms such as loose, pale/orangey floating coloured stools. Often patients experience bloating, increased wind, urgency to pass bowel motions and you will lose weight, even when you are eating well. Malabsorption is treated with pancreatic enzyme supplements. If you think you are suffering with malabsorption speak to your doctor or dietitian.

5. High blood sugar levels

The pancreas produces insulin, which helps to control your blood sugar levels. Throughout your treatment, your blood sugars should be checked occasionally to ensure they are not raised. If you notice that you are increasingly thirsty, are getting up in the night to pass urine, or passing urine a lot more frequently than normal, have a very dry mouth and are losing weight, talk to your doctor.

6. Diarrhoea

Various cancer treatments can cause diarrhoea by irritating the lining of your digestive system. Medications and drugs may also cause diarrhoea so discuss these with your doctor. The tumour itself can also stimulate diarrhoea in certain gut cancers. The most important thing to do is to remain hydrated and to replace the body's lost salts, called electrolytes.

- Constantly sip fluids such as sports drinks or flat carbonated beverages.
- Eat little and often
- Limit high fibre foods like beans, whole grains and raw fruits and vegetables, as they may worsen diarrhoea.
- Pro-biotics may help alleviate symptoms, but can interfere with chemotherapy so consult your doctor first.
- Avoid foods that are greasy or fatty and foods that contain citrus, sweeteners or caffeine. Also avoid prune, apple or pear juice as they worsen diarrhoea symptoms.
- Eat foods which are easy to digest such as bananas, oatmeal and white pasta.
- Sometimes dairy can aggravate symptoms, due to the lactose sugars in milk.

7. Constipation

Chemotherapy may interfere with the nerve supply to the bowel resulting in constipation. Anti-sickness drugs and painkillers can make this worse. Surgery to the stomach or bowel may result in constipation due to problems pushing stool out. Tumours in the abdomen or bowel may make it difficult to have a bowel movement. Constipation is also caused by some drugs, lack of fibre, not enough exercise and not drinking enough water.

- Gradually increase fluids and fibre to help alleviate constipation.
- Certain drinks stimulate a bowel motion. These include prune juice, pineapple juice and hot drinks in the morning.
- High fibre foods include beans, peas, nuts, dried fruit, raw fruits and vegetables, and whole grain cereals and breads.
- If constipation is making you bloated, avoid foods like beans, broccoli, cauliflower, and carbonated drinks.
- Gentle exercise can help prevent and treat constipation.

8. Sore Mouth

Some anticancer drugs may result in sores forming in the mouth, or mouth pain. Treatments to the head and neck area often result in a sore mouth and it can make eating and swallowing quite difficult.

- Eat soft foods like puddings and yogurts. Moisten foods with gravy or sauces to make them easier to eat.
- Puree foods to make them easier to eat and swallow.
- Avoid rough textured foods like toast and foods that are overly tart, salty or vinegar based.
- Sip fluids throughout the day.
- Cold foods such as ice-cream can help soothe a sore mouth.

9. Dry Mouth

Chemotherapy and radiation therapy can damage salivary glands and thicken saliva or reduce the amount of saliva in your mouth. This results in a dry mouth. This makes it a lot more difficult to eat and enjoy food.

- Sip fluids throughout the day to moisten your mouth.
- Maintain good dental health and oral hygiene. Milk helps protect teeth.
- Soft, minced and moist, and smooth pureed foods are easier to eat. Add sauces to moisten foods.
- Avoid salty foods as well as spicy food, caffeine and alcohol which dry out your mouth further.
- Certain foods like fresh bread and pastry can stick to the roof of your mouth, so it is best to avoid them.
- Chewing gum or sucking hard boiled sweets may help to stimulate saliva.
- If you are experiencing increased thirst, or are passing urine more frequently too, then you should discuss these symptoms with your doctor.
- Rinsing your mouth with one of these mouth rinses before meals:
 - Baking soda with water (1/4 tsp. baking soda to 1 cup water)
 - Salted water (1/8 tsp. salt to 1 cup water)
 - Flavoured soda water
 - Sparkling soda water

10. Taste and Smell Changes

Cancer and cancer treatments can greatly affect your taste and smell. Foods that once appealed to you may no longer be desired. Your sensitivity to smells may increase and your taste may decrease or often patients find that they have a metallic taste in their mouth. Foods may seem bitter, bland or salty.

- Try new foods and eat whatever appeals to you. You may suddenly like foods that you once disliked.
- Rinse your mouth with a solution of water and baking powder before and after eating to help normalise taste.
- Cold or lukewarm foods have a weaker taste and smell and may be more tolerable.
- If food tastes too bland, add herbs, seasoning, spices, garlic or onions to boost flavour. Fat is a great flavour carrier so add fats to meals freely.
- If there is metallic taste in your mouth, rinse your mouth regularly and try eating with plastic utensils instead of metal ones.
- Marinating meats can help to mask any metallic tastes.
- Check your tongue in the mirror, if it has a cream / white coating or white spots on the tongue, speak to your doctor.
- Re-try foods every 2-3 weeks as your sense of taste may have returned to normal

11. Indigestion and reflux

Pancreatic cancer can cause indigestion and reflux. In addition to this some chemotherapy or biological therapy drugs used to treat cancer can cause indigestion. If you experience these symptoms you should discuss this with your doctor.

- Avoid large meals. Eat small, frequent meals instead.
- Herbal teas and peppermint tea may help to soothe indigestion.
- Avoid eating foods that are fatty, spicy, vinegar based or citrus as well as carbonated drinks, caffeine and alcohol.
- Often, indigestion and reflux is worse when you are lying down. Avoid eating 2-3 hours before bed and don't lie down after eating a meal. Raising the head of your bed can also help.

COMMON QUESTIONS

Can I use this cookbook if I have diabetes?

If you have diabetes it is important that your blood sugars are controlled, but if you are struggling to eat, it is not always necessary to follow strict dietary restrictions. Speak to your diabetes team if you are struggling to control your blood sugars.

Will sugar fuel my cancer?

A common myth is the belief that sugar feeds cancer. This is an oversimplification of a complex process. All carbohydrates get broken down in to simple sugar units, such as glucose, in the body. All of our body cells, whether they are cancerous or not, then use this glucose as energy. Giving more sugar to your body won't speed up the growth of cancer cells, and depriving yourself of carbohydrates won't slow their growth either- if you eliminate all carbohydrates your body will adapt and create glucose from other sources.

Is following a high-protein, high-calorie diet bad for my health?

Research has shown that weight-loss during cancer recovery is detrimental. It is linked with poorer outcomes and reduced survival. Maintaining a healthy weight is therefore the main nutritional priority during cancer treatment. For those experiencing cancer-induced weight loss, the only way of achieving this is to follow a diet rich in energy and protein. Although high-protein, high-calorie advice may contradict usual healthy eating recommendations, the risks associated with losing weight far outweigh any advantage of following a healthy diet in this situation. Once your weight has stabilised your dietitian will be able to advise you on returning to a healthy-eating diet.

Do I need to take a vitamin and mineral supplement?

If you are struggling to eat fruit and vegetables, a multivitamin and mineral capsule can be helpful. Many pancreatic units recommend the use of an 'A-Z multivitamin and mineral' for those who require pancreatic enzyme tablets. However high doses are not recommended, and may have adverse effects on your health. It is important you tell your doctor about any vitamins, minerals or herbal supplements that you are taking.

Advice to caregivers

Caregivers may find it difficult and frustrating to try to meet the nutritional needs of a family member or loved one who has a poor appetite and is losing weight. Their diets can become very limited and weight loss can become obvious.

When your loved one does not feel like eating, it is important to be patient and encouraging. Often cancer patients don't feel like eating 3 meals a day and what was once their favourite meal may no longer appeal to them. Try to encourage him/her to eat five or six small meals a day. If old favourites no longer appeal then perhaps new foods will be surprisingly well received. Cook in batches and keep food in the fridge and freezer in small portions that can be easily re-heated.

Some other useful tips:

- Offer favourite foods anytime of the day. It is ok to eat breakfast food later in the day or the main dish earlier in the day.
- Prepare the biggest meal of the day when your loved one feels the hungriest. This may often be in the morning.
- Pay attention to the appearance of food. Food that looks appetising is more likely to be consumed.
- If your loved one is nauseous and sensitive to cooking smells, try to prepare meals in a different room or different location if possible from where they will be eating. Serving foods cool or at room temperature can also help to lessen smells.
- Package leftovers in single serving containers and safely store for later or freeze for consumption on another day.
- Spicy, greasy, fatty or heavy meals may not be well tolerated on an unsettled stomach.
- Protein intake is very important to reduce muscle loss in cancer patients. Try to ensure they consume dishes with meat, fish, cheese, nuts or eggs. Milk is also a very nourishing drink.
- Drinking is often easier than eating. If your loved one does not feel like eating a meal, offer sips of smoothies, nourishing soups and nutritional supplements. Try to avoid filling their stomachs with water, tea, coffee and other fluids which have little nourishment. You will find ideas for many nourishing soups and drinks in this book.

Tips to Make Meals More Nourishing

In this cookbook we have tried to enrich the recipes as much as possible. When you are preparing your own meals with your own recipes use the tips below to help make them more nourishing:

- Add butter, sugar, cream or cheese when mashing or blending food or to add more moisture and calories.
- Add seedless jam, marmalade without bits, or honey to porridge, breakfast cereals, milk puddings or smooth yoghurt.
- Add margarine, butter, mayonnaise or soft cheese to mashed potato or cooked vegetables.
- Serve desserts with cream, custard or ice-cream.
- Use full fat dairy products instead of reduced fat.
- Add grated cheese to eggs, soups or pasta dishes.
- Serve meals with sauces and add double cream to cooking sauces.
- Consume nourishing drinks such as fruit juices, full fat milk or milk fortified with skimmed milk powder instead of water.
- Avoid carbonated drinks as they make you feel fuller.
- Include a high protein food (for example: meat, poultry, fish, eggs or cheese) as part of at least two of your meals daily.
- Aim for 3 meals and at least 3 small snacks during the day – small frequent meals spread a few hours apart make it easier to get more calories in.
- Make every mouthful count. Don't fill up on low energy foods like water, diet drinks or plain fruits and vegetables.

Food Safety

Proper food hygiene is always vital but it is especially important for people with cancer as their immune system may be weakened. The tips below will help you to reduce your risk of food poisoning:

- Thoroughly wash hands, utensils and cutting boards between handling raw food and ready-to-eat foods.
- Keep raw meat covered and separate from cooked or ready-to-eat foods. Do not prepare raw and cooked foods on the same surfaces.
- Always thaw frozen food in the fridge. Do not thaw at room temperature. Only defrost food in a microwave if you are planning to cook the food immediately after it has thawed.
- Leftovers should be used within 2-3 days and stored in the fridge at between 0-5°C. They can be reheated as long as they are heated to 70°C or higher. Food should be very hot and steaming before it is served. It is important when reheating stews and casseroles that the liquid boils for around 3-5 minutes to ensure the pieces of meat are completely heated through. Leftovers should only be reheated once.
- Use defrosted foods right away and do not refreeze them.
- Wash vegetables and fruit thoroughly under running water before peeling or cutting. Always wash packaged fruit and vegetables, even if marked 'pre-washed'.
- As berries (fresh or frozen) cannot be peeled or thoroughly washed it is best to boil them briefly to make a smooth puree before incorporating into recipes. Tinned berries can be eaten without boiling.
- Buy only pasteurised, refrigerated milk and dairy products.
- Avoid raw and undercooked meat, fish, shellfish, poultry, tofu or eggs.
- Wash the top lids of canned foods with soap and water before opening.
- Check 'sell by' and 'use by' dates. Do not eat food that is out of date.
- Avoid any bruised/mouldy fruit and vegetables or any moulding dairy products or bread.

16 Recipes

This selection of quick and easy soups is ideal if you have a sore mouth, difficulty swallowing or if you are put off by the sight of a plate of food. The recipes incorporate typical household ingredients and can be made in bulk and frozen for later use. The consistency of soups can be altered according to your needs. Soups can be strained after blending to remove any remaining pieces of food if you need to take completely smooth foods.

Serve soups with a slice of brown bread, oat bread or baguette with cheese to increase the nutritional content. A cup of soup also works well as a nourishing and tasty snack between meals.

A note on skimmed milk powder:

The majority of commercial and homemade soups tend to be low in protein. Because protein is so important for cancer patients many of the soups and nourishing drinks in this book contain an ingredient called skimmed milk powder. Skimmed milk powder is made by the removal of water and the majority of the fat content of milk. It is an excellent source of protein and provides a full range of amino acids. Some brands are also fortified with important vitamins such as vitamin D. It is used to boost the protein content of meals that are low in protein. This is done because a diet rich in protein can help prevent loss of muscle mass. Maintaining muscle mass is very important because low muscle mass is associated with a variety of poor health outcomes in cancer patients. This is why every effort has been made to make the majority of recipes in this book a good source of protein.

Skimmed milk powder can be found in most of the main supermarkets in the tea/coffee aisle. It has a long shelf-life and can be kept in a cupboard for up to 6 weeks once opened. When adding it into soup, mix it with cool liquid first and add to the soup. It will not affect the taste or consistency of the meals; it is just like adding milk to a soup or smoothie.

SMOOTHIES & NOURISHING DRINKS

15 Recipes

These recipes are particularly useful for those with swallowing difficulties or a sore mouth.

They are also ideal snacks if cooking smells are off-putting. Having a ready supply of fruit and ice-cream in the freezer means a variety of chilled, refreshing smoothies can be whipped up in very little time. The warm drinks included are for those who may not be able to tolerate cold drinks due to chemotherapy side-effects.

Normal bananas can be peeled, chopped and frozen in freezer bags for easy use. Tinned or frozen fruit also work well in smoothies. Any fresh or frozen berries used should be boiled briefly and allowed to cool before they are added to smoothies- this is to kill any bacteria that might be present. Any of the recipes below can also be made with fresh fruit and a few cubes of ice blitzed through too to chill it and thicken the consistency.

Using cream, full-fat milk, ice-cream, honey or flaxseed not only helps to thicken the smoothie but also boosts the nutritional content. Experiment with different fruits and additions in order to find the consistency and flavour that suits you best.

As discussed earlier in the book adding skimmed milk powder can greatly enhance the protein content of smoothies. Skimmed milk powder can be purchased in most of the main supermarkets in the tea/coffee aisle. It can be kept in a cupboard for up to 6 weeks once opened. When adding to nourishing drinks, simply add it into the blender with the other ingredients. It will not affect the taste or consistency; it is just like adding milk to a smoothie.
